DANZIG, CORRIDOR PROBLEMS MUST BE SOLVED QUICKLY

Europe Resounds to New German Battle-Cry for Immediate Settlement

WAR DANGER GREATER

Spokesman Says the Situation Cannot Continue Indefinitely

(By International News Service)

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—Europe resounded today to a new German battle cry—the demand that a solution of the Danzig and Polish corridor problems must be a matter of days.

"Every wasted day increases the danger of war!" said Chancellor Hitler's own newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, striking the keynote in a clamor for haste.

A German government spokesman in but slightly less explosive terms added:

"The situation cannot continue indefinitely, but it calls for drastic and speedy readjustment."

While the press continued its campaign of charges that Poland is conducting a "terror" along the Silesian frontier, with the arrest of hundreds of minority Germans, a spokesman said this question would be left in the background for the time being, while the Reich contemplates on a solution of the Danzig-Polish corridor crisis.

The German government, it was stated, is now prepared to take immediate action either by a strong diplomatic protest to Warsaw or by direct intervention with the purpose of halting alleged border outrages.

The spokesman said that Germany is adhering to the German-Polish treaty of non-aggression and consultation of 1934—in spite of the fact that Chancellor Hitler abrogated it last April. Germany, it was explained, is leaving the adjustment of minority problems until a less strained atmosphere can be created with Polish good will and fairness to bring about a future agreement.

STATE ASSIGNS MEN TO GET UNLICENSED DOGS

Will Begin Campaign Here Within the Next Few Days, Says Agent

PENALTY, $10 AND COSTS

A campaign to rid this community of stray and unlicensed dogs will open here within a few days. This was the statement made by William Anderson, representing the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. Mr. Anderson came to Bristol after receiving complaints that a number of unlicensed dogs were in this section and that dogs were running at large in the community.

Two men have been assigned here and will begin their activities within a few days when a determined effort will be made to get every dog without a license. Persons owning dogs which do not have licenses or harboring unlicensed dogs, or persons on whose premises unlicensed dogs are found will be prosecuted.

Anderson states that the penalty for violation of the dog law is $10 fine and costs.

"We are giving the public a few days' warning," said Anderson, "and after that we will begin a rigid survey and make arrests."

To Determine Sanity of "Mercy Slayer" of Sister

ALLENTOWN, Aug. 18.—A move has been launched to determine the sanity of Miss Margaret L. Cowan, former nurse, who on Tuesday killed her mentally ill sister, Mrs. Louella Saegeer, 67, in the state hospital, here.

With the launching of the movement, John L. Cutshall, Lehigh county district attorney, lodged a formal charge of murder against Miss Cowan, who claims she killed her sister to relieve her of her suffering.

"She is apparently a believer of euthanasia—mercy killing," the District Attorney said. He asked Dr. Harry G. Good, Lehigh county prison physician, to make a report on the mental condition of the woman, who has repeated:

"My work on earth is done. If they electrocute me tomorrow, that will be all right. I'm fully conscious of what I've done."

Depending on the recommendation of Dr. Good, the District Attorney may ask the appointment of a sanity commission. Otherwise Miss Cowan will probably be tried in the September term of criminal court.

The dead sister will be buried today in Fairview Cemetery here with funeral services at two p. m. in Quakertown. The Rev. Roland Rupp, of St. James Reformed Church, will officiate.

"Marauder" Is Frightened

(By "The Stroller")
A group of men, standing in a Mill street store a few days ago, witnessed attempts of a small animal to climb up the wheels of a baby carriage "parked" on the sidewalk on Wood street, near Mill.

Curiosity getting the better of them, one of the number ran across the thoroughfare to try to identify the intruder, and to his surprise found it to be a large rat, which scampered off at his approach.

Fortunately no baby was in the carriage at the time.

EXPECT SIXTH ARREST IN NEGRO MURDER CASE

Authorities Believe Murder of Charlie Hudson Will Soon Be Solved

5 MEN NOW IN CUSTODY

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 18.—The sixth arrest and the solving of the murder of Charlie Hudson, Jamison Negro farm hand, is expected within the next week, County Detective Antonio Russo and Pennsylvania Motor Police, said yesterday.

Hudson's skeleton was identified a short time after it was found a week ago in an abandoned lane near Jamison, Bucks county, by Willie (Baltimore) Branch, Negro worker on the farm of N. I. Rubincam, Jamison. Branch told Motor Police that the remains were those of Hudson, who he said once lived in Philadelphia.

Five Negroes are being detained in the Bucks County Prison in connection with the investigation. They are Branch, Joseph Suber, Arthur Schultze, John Watson and Cleo M. Smith, the latter two being arrested yesterday. With the arrest of a sixth man, the name of whom the police are withholding, the murder will be solved, they believe.

Statements from the five being detained assure the police that they were all with Hudson a short time before he was murdered. They took part in a drinking party under a tree near the Rubincam farm, and all say that Hudson "suddenly disappeared." That was last May. His remains were found a week ago.

When Arthur Schultze was arrested after the body had been found, he is alleged to have told police that Branch took him to the spot where the body was found and said, "here is the fellow that I bumped off for $3.00," but Schultze denies now that he made that statement.

ROHM & HAAS WINS FIRST GAME OF SERIES

"Eddie" Sullivan Allows Only One Hit in Three Frames

HOLLAND IS RELIEVED

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE Schedule for Tomorrow ROHM & HAAS vs. HALL ALUMINUM (Landreth's field, 3 p. m.)

The relief pitching of "Eddie" Sullivan stood out last evening on Landreth's field as the Rohm and Haas team rallied to defeat the Hall Aluminum nine, 7-6, in the first of a three-game series to decide which team shall meet the Diamond nine for the Bristol crown.

Ascending the hill after his mate, Wils Holland, had been battered in the fourth, Sullivan hurled the final frames of the contest and during this stretch silenced the Hall bats and allowed but a lone hit which was a single by Sagolia in the sixth. He struck out four batters.

Sullivan received credit for the pitching triumph. Holland during his tenure on the hill allowed eight hits and six runs. The loss went to "Reds" Gallagher who hurled wonderful ball until he weakened in the sixth inning.

The fielding gem of the tilt was exhibited by Howie Black in the final inning of the game. Playing the initial sack, Black leaped high into the air to snatch what seemed to be a Texas Leaguer from the bat of Williams. He fell after making the catch but held on to the pill.

"Wheeler" McCanhan provided the thrills for the losing side. In the first he robbed Rockhill of a sure hit. He tripped with the bags loaded in the second and singled with two on in the third but ran afoul of Umpire Felix Tomlinson when he protested a decision at second base. He was promptly ejected from the game.

The chemical workers were first to score, counting in their initial turn with the stick Wheeler McCanhan made a sparkling catch of Rockhill's high fly along the right field foul line. Brunner walked. Dick was safe when Gallagher fumbled his dribbler and Massilla hit to center, scoring Brunner. Oppman struck out. Dougherty was safe on Sagolia's error to fill the bases. Massilla rounded second and went in to

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

They Can't Give Up

August 17. SINCE adjournment of Congress the general political situation has clarified sufficiently to make two things very plain, indeed—first, that the bottom has dropped out of the "draft Roosevelt" idea and the third—term movement has no real substance; second, that, notwithstanding this, the agitation for a third term will be kept up probably until the convention meets.

THESE things seem contradictory. Actually, they are not. Most practical politicians are as much in agreement about them—as they are about the reasons for them.

Take, first, the draft suggestion. Just as Mr. Roosevelt and his New Deal aides have made it clear they will not support an anti-New Deal—or even a moderate, middle-of-the-road Democrat—the anti-New Deal Democrats have gone so far as to make support of Mr. Roosevelt, or of anyone handpicked by Mr. Roosevelt because of devotion to his policies, practically impossible.

THE gap between the regular Democrats and the New Dealers is obviously too wide to bridge. If Mr. Roosevelt cannot dominate the convention, he has threatened to bolt his choice. If he should dominate it to the extent of a third nomination, the anti-New Deal Democrats would have no alternative save the nomination of an independent Democratic ticket, which amounts to the same thing as a bolt. Under such circumstances, the logical solution, of

Hitler to Direct Forces in War

By H. R. Knickerbocker

Paris, Aug. 18.—Chancellor Hitler means to be a Napoleon in war as well as in peace. Der Fuehrer will be his own Hindenburg and Ludendorff in the next war.

He plans to take over active direction of the war, and be supreme commander in fact as he is now in name.

These are the conclusions drawn today by French military men from recent publications in official Reichswehr journals and in particular from an article in the "Militar-Wochenblatt," by his editor in chief, General Wetzel.

From this and other articles, it is obvious that the question of Hitler's taking active command of the army in war, has aroused disputes among the German higher officers.

The dispute only began this year, because only after the conquest of Czechoslovakia would Hitler reveal signs that he was beginning to consider himself a military as well as political genius.

His political genius has never been better demonstrated than by the fact that he would be able, and so that there is no question, to take over the active command of the army if he wished.

On August 2, 1934, the day Hindenburg died at dawn, I witnessed the swearing in of the Berlin garrison to the new Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, in person.

The ceremony took place in mid-afternoon, and the army had scarcely had time to hear the news of Hindenburg's death. Nevertheless, thousands of officers throughout the Reich, without communication with one another, reached the same decision to absent themselves on sick leave in an attempt to avoid taking an oath to Hitler.

Meanwhile in a significant burst of self-education, Hitler has ordered a whole library of technical military books and is spending more than half of his time in conversation with his favorites of the general staff.

NAVY OFFICIALS PRAISE LATE VINCENT ARMSTRONG

Navy Radioman, First Class, Filled an Honorable and Responsible Position

HAD A FINE RECORD

Letters, high in praise of Vincent Paul Armstrong, who met death suddenly when a United States Navy plane crashed at San Diego, California, last Friday, have been received by Warren V. Armstrong, 310 Jefferson avenue, father of the deceased young man.

More details of the crash of the bomber in which Armstrong, radioman first class, and Ensign T. R. Wood, 28, both lost their lives, is given in messages from Navy officials.

The letters follow:

Fleet Air Detachment, Naval Air Station, San Diego, California, 12 August, 1939.

Dear Sir:

While nothing within my power to say or do can hope to diminish the deep loss that you have suffered, I do want you to know how your son served his country and the Navy while in my command.

During the past particularly critical period in world affairs he was an honorable and responsible part of aviation in the United States Navy, a service that we believe to be worthy of the nation that it defends. You may be proud of your son's professional skill; in the performance of his daily work, he was a credit to his family and to his squadron.

Yesterday's accident occurred during preparation for dive-bombing, a practice essential to the maintenance of striking power of naval aviation. We have the small compensation of knowing that death was quick and merciful.

The plane in which your son was flying entered a normal dive, dropped its bomb, and immediately began to resume normal flight. For some reason not yet known to us, the plane failed to continue its recovery and struck the ground in a modified dive. Armstrong's discharge of his duties reflected a fine family background. I also feel a distinct personal loss.

With sincere sympathy, I am,

C. F. GREBER, Lieutenant Commander, U. S. Navy Commander, Scouting Squadron 3.

Bureau of Aeronautics, Navy Department, Washington, D. C., August 14, 1939.

Dear Mr. Armstrong:

The sad information concerning the death of your son, Vincent Paul Armstrong, in an airplane accident at Miramar, has been reported to me. Permit me to offer you my heartfelt sympathy on this sorrowful occasion.

Your son had a splendid record in the Navy and was a valued member of Scouting-Plane Squadron Three of Aircraft Battle Force. But, as his father, yours is the more personal loss. May your son's splendid example

PRIMING HAS NOT PRIMED

It has been mentioned in Washington as a possibility that President Roosevelt may “carry to the people” the issue posed by the House defeat of his latest pump-priming program, the lending bill. He is to make a western tour anyway and that fact itself well may have prompted the rumor mentioned.

The prospect, if substantiated, would be welcome. An appeal to the people certainly would cause a public debate on the question, which is one that for intelligent voting should be uppermost in the 1940 campaign.

The people's present main interest is in business recovery.

The President's sole formula for business recovery is pump-priming, of which the defeated lending bill was to have been from now on the principal vehicle.

If an argument still can be made for this formula, now in its seventh year of unsuccessful trial, the people ought to hear it.

Otherwise, they logically should turn in 1940 to the Republican formula of attempting to curb Federal borrowing and to instill confidence in business.

Unhappily for the prospect of a definitive debate on this question, practical politics will rule against it. The rumored appeal to the people probably will never be heard.

Under any other circumstances, a discreet silence on this subject may be expected, for no one knows better than the President the difficulties an appeal to the people would face. For four years at least, all polls have indicated, a majority of the public has been opposed to Federal borrowing and skeptical of the theory that excused it. An appeal from the House vote would encounter this popular verdict, which would not be easily shaken, being based on the familiarly observable fact that pump-priming simply has not worked.

THREE LANE DANGERS

Michigan's state highway department rules against further construction of three-lane highways. This type of road, designed originally as a safety precaution, has proved a death trap.

In part, perhaps, the danger element in the three lanes comes from a habit fostered by wider roads. The familiar signs, “Slow Traffic, Keep To The Right,” prompts the speeder to think he has right of way in the middle of the road. Thus the middle of the three-lane road becomes a meeting ground for speeders going both ways.

This is unfortunate, since the three lanes are adequate, if properly used, for carrying normal traffic on most roads outside of the metropolitan districts. For the big main thoroughfares the ideal is a complete separation of traffic going in opposite directions. For less busy roads, the two-lane type is safer and more satisfactory.

Providing a no man's land in which reckless driver do their wrecking, is proving bad policy.

To escape baldness, select parents with heavy hair, says a physician. “February, and March,” says another, “are the best months in which to be born.” The wise child will make arrangements early.

President Roosevelt says he is taking steps to cut expenses, “next year.” Congress tried economizing by cutting appropriations, this year, but that seemed contrary to the President.

SAVE VITAMINS OF VEGETABLES FOR SAKE OF HEALTH

By Miss Edna Stephany
(Home Economics Representative)

The good old summer time may mean picnics, swimming, and good times to many of us, but it also means a time for us to give our families plenty of those fleeting vitamins.

Look out into the garden and there we will find delicious fresh vegetables loaded with the vitamins we need to make us “healthy, wealthy and wise!” It's a shame most of us through poor care of vegetables rating A plus in the garden make them become D minus by the time they reach our dinner table.

If we wish to save as much of the vitamins as possible, we pick the vegetables only a short time before using them. Instead of allowing the beans to stay in the basket on the back porch, put them in a cool or cold place and save the vitamins.

The best way to get the full amount of vitamins from vegetables, is to eat them raw. Raw vegetable salads are especially good this time of year to pep up jaded appetites. Practically any raw vegetable may be included in a mixed salad bowl. Have the vegetable cold and crisp and add the dressing the last minute.

We cook vegetables in their skin if we wish to save the vitamins. This of course is not practical for some vegetables. Recent work on vitamins shows that short rapid cooking retains more vitamins than long cooking, as steaming and baking. Soda and other alkalies often used in cooking vegetables destroy the vitamins. Since many vitamins are soluble in water, it is well to use only a small amount of boiling salted water.

The vitamins soluble in fat, as A and D, cause little worry when preparing and cooking vegetables. Vitamin B1 is fairly stable to cooking but soda destroys this vitamin. Curiously enough, vegetables containing B1 lose less of this vitamin when fried than when boiled. Vitamin B2 is not lost by cooking but soda destroys it.

Vitamin C is easily lost by long cooking and by the use of soda. Acid seems to help preserve this vitamin, while copper is most destructive. This vitamin is most fleeting because it is destroyed by the oxygen of the air.

The Great Game of Politics

course, is a compromise candidate but that negates the draft idea

as effectively as any other result.

IT IS, of course, ridiculous to talk about breaking the anti-third term tradition with a President whose party is deeply split; whose party leaders (except those who have special personal reasons like Mayor Hague) are in revolt; whose own Postmaster General, the chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is opposed to a third nomination; and whose program a Congress heavily dominated by his own party, has definitely rejected; and whose own Cabinet is not united in wanting him to continue in the White House.

WITHIN the last week there was added to all this the significant declaration of Congressman Sam Rayburn, Democratic leader of the House, who has fought Mr. Roosevelt's battles through three sessions of Congress and has espoused every New Deal policy. Mr. Rayburn, who certainly must be regarded as personally friendly to the President, has just declared his preference for some one else as the Democratic nominee for 1940. The someone else happens to be Mr. Garner, who, every Administration spokesman agrees, is one man Mr. Roosevelt will not support. It is not easy to minimize the significance of Mr. Roosevelt's own House leader and friend not being for him. It cannot be explained on the ground either of State pride or personal friendship. Other Texans in Congress have not thought it necessary to come out for Mr. Garner. There was nothing in the situation to make Mr. Rayburn do so, which is what makes it really important.

ADD all this up, throw in the Hatch Act, which takes the Federal office-holder out of the convention and also throw in the bolt threat, which is essentially defensive and defeatist, and it is clear why no realistic politician now takes the third-term talk seriously. Yet, it will be kept up seriously to the very end. Why? The answer is because Mr. Roosevelt has surrounded himself by a group of men as aides and advisers unlike any group around any previous President. Some are in his Cabinet; some hold more or less minor positions on Federal commissions and in the departments. But they have a weight and influence with the President wholly out of proportion to their official positions.

THE outstanding fact about this group—generally referred to as the “inner circle”—the thing which they all have in common is that, without exception, they were unknown to public life before Mr. Roosevelt became President. Prior to that time they lived in rather complete obscurity. It was Mr. Roosevelt who invested them with power and position. It is as unlikely that any other President would have picked these men for advisers and intimates as it is that any other President will keep them. When Mr. Roosevelt goes out they will return to the obscurity from which he plucked them.

THERE is no disagreement about that. They know it and so does everybody else. It is no reflection upon their sincerity to say that their advocacy of a third term is heavily flavored with self-interest. That is apparent. Nevertheless, they believe in the Roosevelt policies, most of which they inspired, in a way no one else does. They feel, as does he, that those who dissent are either ignorant or vicious or both. Combine this with the natural desire to keep their place in the sun, and it is easy to understand their determination to keep the third-term talk going, regardless of the realities and futile as it seems. What else is there for them to do?

"REDHEADS ARE LUCKY"

By VERA BROWN

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER VIII

In the midst of her confusion Handsome burst out of the elevator, strode into the lobby. It was like a first act entrance. He exuded well being, complete content. Pressed, shaved, not a hair out of place. And he had on a new suit, Mike was sure.

In that first glimpse of Handsome, Mike was more furious than she had been in her life. Here she'd lost sleep, been half wild with anxiety over him, and he steps out of the elevator looking as though he did not have a care in the world.

Then Handsome caught her eye, and waved, his old salute.

Mike melted. His progress was slow across the lobby. Downey stopped him. Some tourists asked for autographs. Handsome came in a kind of triumphal procession to her counter.

“How's the Skipper?”
“Maybe he'd forgotten he'd ever written it. She'd pretend she hadn't got it. But his eyes traveled to the spot where the note had been. As he opened the morning paper casually, he said:
“Did you get my note?”
“Yes.”
“Well?”
People came up to the counter. Mike was busy for a little.
“Larry, you've lost your mind.”
“Never felt better in my life.” He grinned at her. “I bet you were surprised.”
“Surprised is a mild word for it.”
“When can I talk to you? What about lunch?”
“You know, I don't take more than fifteen minutes.”
“Then, it will have to wait until dinner.”
“I've got to go home.”
“All right then, I'll come over and see Jimmie. I got that baseball from Ace today. I'll come on over after dinner.”
Mike did not answer. “See you later, Skipper.” He waved goodbye. “I'm going to a movie after I wrap myself around a steak.”
Mike stared after him, torn between resentment and laughter: “Steak, indeed! And I haven't been able to eat for 24 hours worrying about him.”

Never had the subway seemed so slow as it did that night. Mike fingered her gloves impatiently. There was so much to do. The house would be in shambles and she was firm in her determination to get most of the family away before Handsome came.

When she walked into the house, everybody had eaten, and were gathered in Jimmie's room. Her mother had left her some supper on the kitchen table. Mike went in to see Jimmie, bent down and kissed him.

“You're having company to-night?”
“Handsome?” Jimmie's face lighted.
“Yes.”
“Great!” Her brother Jack jumped up. “I've got a picture I want him to autograph.”

“I'm dying to see him!” Mary cried.

“Now look here, all of you. You two kids are going to the movies.”

They raised their voices in violent protest.
“You are. Mother, you help me. They've got to. I won't have this place all messed up and you kids hanging all over Handsome when he comes.”

“You're mean!” Jack retorted.
“You're to see him. You can come in before he leaves. But he's coming just to see Jimmie. Help me get this room fixed up, Mary.”

Mrs. Shannon joined in the argument with the children.

“Do I have to leave?” asked her father.
“Of course not, dad.” Mike dropped a kiss on his head. “But please just this once, Mary!”

Mike rushed out into the sitting room, began picking up papers, magazines. It was a shabby room, with shabby furniture. Mike looked at her home with impartial eyes. Dad had done the best he could. Handsome might just as well know, first as last, they were poor.

Mary coming out of her sulks, joined Mike in the living room. She brought the carpet sweeper.

“You're a darling, Mary!”
“You'll keep him here until we get home!”

“Of course. Here's money for the movies.” Mary gave Mike a hug. “Now go and change your dress. Fix your hair. I'll take care of this mess,” she added.

Mrs. Shannon was busy in Jimmie's room and Mr. Shannon wandered around like a lost soul. Finally he went into his bedroom, came back with his hat on.

“I'm going to get out of here while all this fuss is going on.”
“Dad, I didn't mean that.”
“Oh, I'll be back. I want to see this Handsome fellow.”

“Dad, put on your good coat.”
“I'll do nothing of the kind. This is good enough for a ball player!”

A half hour later, when Mike came out in a white wash dress and went in to Jimmie, he looked at her appraisingly:

“Gee, you're pretty!”
“That's because you love me.”
“But doesn't Handsome love you, too?”

“Don't be silly, dear. Of course not.”
“I'll bet he does. I'll tell him he's got to.”

“If you do, he'll never come back.” Jimmie laughed: “I'll bet he will.”

Mike sat down in a chair beside Jimmie: “Darling, you won't do anything to make me sorry I asked him to come, Jimmie? You won't say anything foolish that will make me unhappy?”

“Aw no! I'll be good.”
“Mary took Jack off to the movies before eight o'clock. Mrs. Shannon went to change into a fresh house dress. Mike found waiting difficult. She wished now she'd not told Handsome he could come. She went into her bedroom and looked again at that note he had left for her in the morning. But Jimmie called her, and she went on in to him.

It was desperately hard, sitting there, pretending to devote all her time to Jimmie when her ear was strained to hear the doorbell. The hour dragged on.

After nine Mike had almost given up hope when the door bell rang. She rushed to push the buzzer, her hands trembling. Her mother, pretending not to notice Mike's nervousness, went in to Jimmie's room.

Mike opening the door, could hear Handsome tramping up the four flights of stairs. She leaned against the doorway, waiting.

“How are you, Skipper!” Handsome called when he caught sight of her from down the hall. He came in as casually as though he were accustomed to climb those stairs every day.

“You're the only guest we've ever had who could climb up here and not puff!” Mike managed a laugh.

“That's because I live right.” He bent and kissed the tip of her nose threw his hat on theavenport.

“Mother's in with Jimmie. He's so excited.”

She led the way into the stuffy bedroom. Handsome came over to Jimmie's bedside.

“How's tricks?” he demanded, grinning down at the boy. “And here's that baseball.”

Handsome, of course, won Mrs. Shannon completely. Mike knew that would happen. Her mother was beaming, obviously adoring.

“But your name isn't on here!” Jimmie protested holding the precious baseball in his left hand, the hand which was not crippled.

“I'm not up to that yet. Next year maybe, when I'm going great, I'll autograph the other side for you. By that time, you'll be well enough to come and see me play.”

“Do you really think so?”
“Of course.”

Jimmie started a long cross-examination, questions of every kind. Handsome settled himself beside the boy and his huge frame seemed to fill the little bedroom. Mrs. Shannon slipped out of the room after a while. And finally Mike left the two together.

“I like Mike. She's swell,” Jimmie said when his sister had gone.

“So do I; I think she's swell, too.”
“I'm glad.”

“Are you?”
“Sure! Most of the guys she knows are sissy guys.”

“Then I'm not a sissy?”
“Gee, no. You can fight!” Jimmie grinned.

They got along famously. Mike came back and then Handsome told Jimmie he was leaving town with the team soon.

“We'll be on the road for six weeks this time. I'm going to miss Mike . . . and you, Jimmie.”
“It must be fun traveling in a parlor car.”

“A fellow gets kinda tired of it.” Handsome smiled at Mike as he thought of the banned poker games.

“Now, Jimmie, I've got to take Mike out for a little while. She's my girl you know, and I've got to buy her some ice cream.” As Jimmie's face fell, Handsome added: “We'll come back and bring you some. What kind? Chocolate?”

“Chocolate!” agreed Jimmie.

RECIPES

Bran Pie Shell Rings Menu Bell!
Gone are the days when the pie shell was just a container for a filling—it's part and parcel of that good pie taste now that bran is in the makings! Pie is one of the oldest food forms in history—even good King Arthur and the knights of the round table ate 'em—but they only knew the meat variety.

The American housewife was the genius who pushed the pie on to greater glory—with fancy fillings, nut-like bran pastries, and even lattice work toppings for peaches to peak through!

Not one but two fingers will be "in the pie" if it's made with one of the delicious fillings given here and put in all-bran pastry shell!

All-Bran Pastry
1/4 cup all-bran
1 1/2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup shortening
4 tablespoons cold water (more or less)

Roll all-bran until fine; combine with flour and salt. Cut in shortening. Add water, a little at a time, until dough is moist enough to hold together. Roll out on lightly floured board to about one-eighth inch in thickness.

Pastry Shell: Place rolled pastry loosely in pan. Trim edge, leaving about one-half inch of pastry beyond rim of pan. Fold extended edge under and flute. Prick pastry shell with fork and bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) 10 to 15 minutes.

Yield: One two-crust pie or two eight-inch pastry shells.

Apple Cream Pie

3/4 cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup sour cream
1 egg
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 cups finely chopped tart apples
1 recipe all-bran pastry

Topping:
2 1/2 tablespoons flour
2 1/2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon butter
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

Combine sugar and flour; add cream, well beaten egg, vanilla and salt. Beat until smooth. Add apples and mix thoroughly.

Combine flour, sugar, butter and cinnamon and mix thoroughly. Sprinkle over top of pie and continue baking in slow oven (325 degree F.) about 20 minutes.

Yield: One nine-inch pie.
Fresh Peach Pie
1 recipe all-bran pastry
4 cups fresh sliced peaches
1/2 cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour

Line pie pan with pastry. Arrange peaches in pie shell, sift over sugar and flour. Place strips of pastry lattice fashion over top of pie and bake in moderate hot oven (400 degrees F.) one-half hour. Reduce to 375 degrees F. and continue baking one-half hour or until delicately brown and peaches are done.

Yield: One nine-inch pie.
Orange Meringue Pie
3 1/4 tablespoons cornstarch
2/3 cup sugar
1 1/2 cups orange juice
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1/4 teaspoon salt

3 eggs, separated
1 tablespoon butter
6 tablespoons sugar

Mix cornstarch and sugar together; add orange juice, grated rind, and salt; stir until smooth. Beat egg yolks slightly and add with butter to cornstarch mixture. Cook in top of double boiler until thick and creamy, stirring constantly. Cool. Pour into baked all-bran pastry shell. Top with meringue made from three egg whites and six tablespoons sugar, beaten until thick and fluffy. Bake in slow oven (325 degrees F.) about 20 minutes or until delicately browned.

Yield: One eight-inch pie.

SINDORA CLAIMS MANGINI DUCKS BATTLE WITH HIM

Sindora's Chief Ambition,
After Fighting Rivers, Is To Battle Mangini

RIVERS STIFF OPPONENT

Wind-Up Will Show Mangini
In Go With Young
Terry

Sam Sindora, of Trenton, who meets Joe Rivers, of Philadelphia, here, at St. Ann's Arena, Monday night, has only one ambition at the present time. That is to box Larry Mangini, of Trenton. Sindora claims that Mangini is ducking the issue with him because he is afraid of the result if and when they do meet. Sam thinks he will beat him without any trouble. On the other hand Mangini don't even consider Sindora as any competition at this time.

Promoter Joe Gruerio has promised Sindora that if he defeats Rivers on Monday he will make every effort to secure Larry Mangini as his next opponent. In meeting Rivers, who was scheduled to box Sindora on the last show but was taken ill, Sam is going in with a fellow who has been in there with quite a few of the hefty punchers. Rivers has boxed such fellows as Baby Kid Chocolate, Wildcat O'Connor, of Scranton, and many others. He is a rugged youngster with dynamite in either hand when he connects. It will be to Sindora's advantage if he remembers this when the bell sounds starting the fight.

The main six-rounder will show "Goat" Kennedy, who substituted for Rivers on the last show against Sindora and put up a great fight, meeting hard-punching Fred Nebo, of Philadelphia. While the decision was rendered against Kennedy in the Sindora match, the "Goat" wants another chance to meet his conqueror if he defeats Nebo. "The last time," said Kennedy, "I wasn't in shape, as I had to take the match on a moment's notice. The next time Mr. Sindora had better watch out. I'll take very good care of the gentleman if I ever get him in the ring again."

The windup, for eight rounds, will show Pat "Wildman" Mangini, of Philadelphia, against the come-back kid of Trenton, Young Terry. The four-rounders will show Paul Marvin, the Golden boy out of Rutgers, meeting Johnny Glover, of Trenton. Another will show Harry "Giant" Kelly meeting Joe Brickie. These two are heavyweight matches. Kelly weighs 250 pounds, and between the four men nearly 1,000 pounds of beef on the hoof will be in the ring.

BOWLING LEAGUE IS ORGANIZING FOR SEASON

A meeting of the Bristol Bowling Association was held Wednesday evening for the purpose of getting the various leagues organized for the coming season. Fourteen representatives of teams were present and plans were discussed.

Teams represented were: Rohm & Haas, Bartons, Elks, Asco, Auto Boys, Wilson Distillery, Paterson Parchment Paper Co., Superior Zinc, Fleetwings, and Knights of Columbus.

No action was taken on the various plans submitted, due to the fact that there were not enough captains present.

Another meeting will be held next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, and as many captains as possible should be present. Anyone wishing to enter a team, please be present or leave their name and address with F. J. O'Boyle at the bowling alleys, or Horace States, 228 Millin street, Bristol.

Rohm & Haas Wins First Game of Series

third when Bauroth picked the ball up after the miscue and threw home. However, Dick held on third, and while J. Dougherty ran down the third base line after Dick, Massilla scampered back to second without a play being made for him. Locke whiffed.

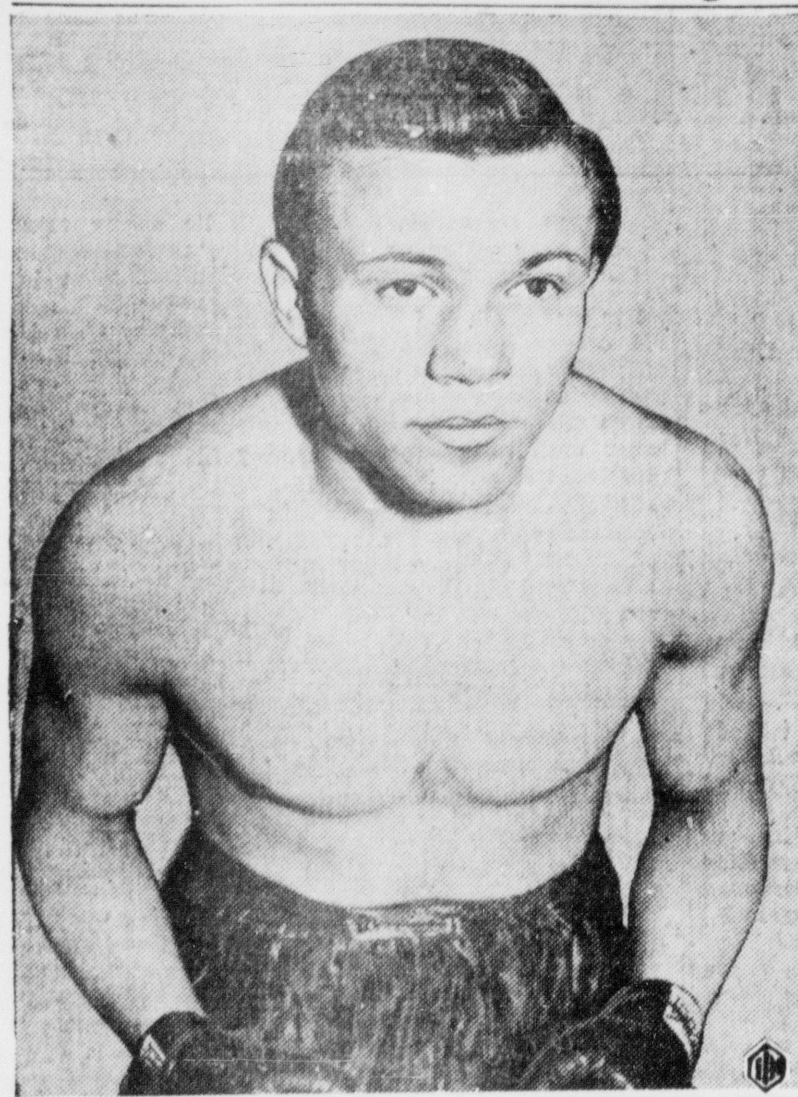

The short lead was good until the second when with one gone, Sagolla walked. Bauroth lined a hit to right. Forman hit the left, filling the bases. Williams popped up. Holland grooved two strikes over McCahan but on the next pitch McCahan lined a hit to left which hopped over Brunner's head for a triple, cleaning the bags. McCahan went out at the plate, trying to stretch the hit.

A trio of markers put Rohm and Haas in the lead in the third. After Brunner went out, Forman allowed Dick's bounder to go through his legs. Massilla lined a hit to right, Dick going to third. Oppman hit a high fly to left which McCahan dropped. Dick registering. Dougherty counted both runners with a hit. Dougherty went out at second and Locke struck out.

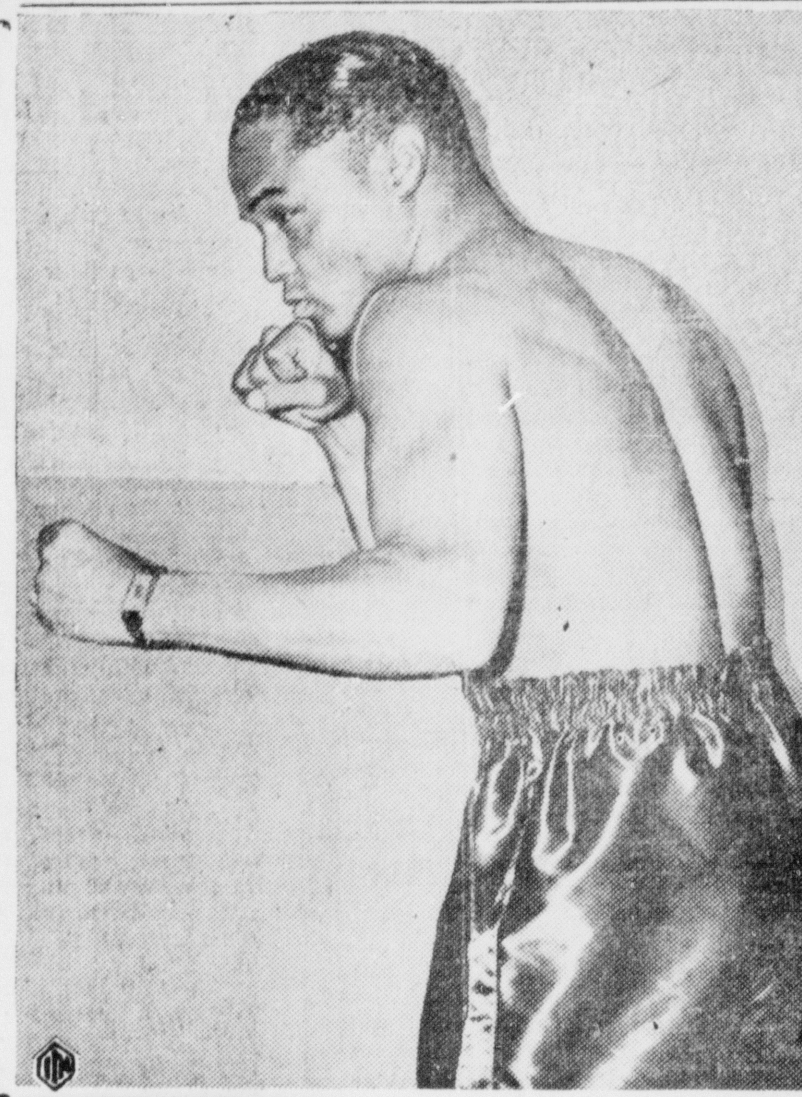

Hall went into the lead again in the fourth. With two away, Bauroth doubled to right center on a ball that Black just barely got his glove on but could not hold. Forman reached base on an error by Massilla. Williams hit a towering fly to the left field foul line which was fair by inches scoring both runners. Williams and Forman counted on McCahan's second hit but the Hall rightfielder protested his play at second in which Tomlinson called him out that he was thumbed out of the game.

The Maple Beach team won out in the sixth. Harrison hit for Locke and popped to Forman. Black hit sharply to center, Sullivan was passed. Rock-of courage, and your memory of him, help to bring you some consolation at this time.

Sincerely yours,

M. A. MITTSCHER,
Captain, U. S. N., Acting Chief of Bureau.

The following is an excerpt from a letter sent by the former Miss Catherine Gaffney, now the wife of Lieut. McReynolds, who is residing in San Diego:

Dear Marie:

Well, I just got back from the funeral. I was going to write to Warren, but you can stop over some time and tell him about it.

His brother was buried from the Cathedral (three times as big as St. Mark's), and the church was filled with Navy men from higher ranking officers down. There were about 300 sailors in church, all in uniform. The priest gave a grand talk, as many of the people were not Catholics. He said "This young man was a credit to the United States Navy. He was held in high esteem by his superiors and fellow-workers, and if his rewards in heaven are counted by the friends he has gathered here, he will have peace." It was about the nicest address I ever heard at a funeral.

The church was filled—full military honors. He would not have received such honors in Bristol. . . . He had many friends and was well liked.

STATE OPENS DRIVE ON MARIHUANA

Old State Law Enforced To Make Field Owners Get Rid of Weed

An intensive campaign to rid the State of the narcotic weed, Marihuana, has been started by Dr. John J. Shaw, State Secretary of Health.

"We have had a lot of complaints that young people, including high school pupils, have been smoking marihuana cigarettes with very harmful results, ranging from minor irritations to sadistic acts and jumping out of windows," Dr. Shaw said today, "and we decided it was about time that a really effective program against the weed was started."

Dr. Shaw said most of the reports of the use of the "reefers" by high school pupils came from smaller communities and not from Philadelphia.

"But I do not mean to imply there isn't any marihuana smoking among Philadelphia young people," he said. "I think the cases have just not been distinguished from alcoholic intoxication or just plain trouble-making. In the smaller places, on the contrary, everyone knows his neighbor's business and the marihuana cases are more apt to be noticed and complained of."

Whether high school pupils have succumbed to the "reefers" in any great numbers or not, several men have been convicted in Philadelphia and elsewhere for selling the cigarettes.

The drug not only exaggerates the victim's senses of space and time, but it also releases inhibitions and thus has been blamed for many horrible crimes, including murder.
